A Subject and Predicate is used to form a complete sentence. A subject is who or what the sentence is about. The predicate is the action the subject does in a sentence. The predicate always begins with a verb. You cannot write a complete sentence if you leave out a subject or predicate. Both the subject and and predicate are needed to express a complete thought. A sentence that is missing either a subject or predicate is called a sentence fragment. Most students struggle at an early age writing sentences with both a subject and predicate. If they keep it as simple as this, your learners will have no problems underling the simple predicate in each sentence. Practice Writing Compound Predicates You and your craving-for-more champs had a blast dealing with compound subjects. This PDF explores the concept in predicates as kids write a compound predicate for each sentence. This subject and predicate activity is sure to please! This tile activity features divided sentences where students combine the tiles to create a sentence. Subjects and predicates (or nouns and verbs) are the main componenets of English sentences. They comprise the most essentail information of every sentence. Every sentence has two main parts: a complete subject and a complete predicate. The complete subject includes all words that tell who or what the subject is. Example: Most birds | can fly. The complete predicate includes all words that state the action or condition of the subject. Example: Most birds | can fly. Although these sentences lack the adjectives, adverbs, conjunctions, et cetera that we are used to (and that give sentences more flavor), they still provide the basic function of conveying pertinent information. Below you'll find our list of printable subjects and predicates worksheets. In addition, worksheets on related topics, such as sentence fragments, commands and questions, and inverted sentences have been provided. Each worksheet provides explanations, examples, and practice manipulating both subject and predicate. Practice involves using your knowledge of subjects and predicates to be able to identify and correct syntax errors, and to create sound, complete sentences.
